The Owl's Way Workshop

What a fun day! I wasn't sure if I could explain within 5 hours the nature of the Universe, how a person's mind works, how energy works, and how to test it; plus, show how to do an amazing healing technique without the need of a physical client. My challenge was enhanced by a 50 year span of age within the group, which brought various levels of understanding. Well, from the feedback received and the inspiration gained, I would have to say, it was a very successful day.

To all the participants, THANK YOU! Thank you for making it such a grand event. Thank you for your willingness to think outside of the box and for arriving at your divine appointment on time. You are amazing beings of light. To have you all gathered in one room for a day was deeply humbling. I honor you all—thank you. And know, I am here if need be.

From Growls to Tail Wags

Sammy was a happy dog when he was a pup. Then life happened. Nothing in particular occurred, it was more that he was having a hard time socializing. He would growl at house guests, the neighbor dogs, and small kids. It got to the point where Sammy's dad, Malcolm was afraid to take him out. "He's a really good dog, but I'm so afraid that he might attack someone."

We talked about the fear factor and how Sammy would pick up on it and the importance of Malcolm staying calm. The cycle was set, however, even when Malcolm would relax and let Sammy sniff butts, Sammy was still on guard.

Having tried all the practical remedies for this type of behavior to no avail, as a last resort, I offered to put Sammy through our Energy Cocoon. This is a four day process that deals with an animal on many levels. It is all done long distance in that, Sammy has his life at home, and I basically put his spirit on my massage table at my home. Through intention, prayer and energy work we were able to clear many energetic blocks, and reestablish a sense of well-being.

A week after the Energy Cocoon I contacted Malcolm to see how Sammy was doing.

"He's like a new dog," Malcolm said. "We've had houseguests and always before, Sammy would growl and not let them into the kitchen. Now he greets them with his tail wagging and no growls. The other day my wife and I, Sammy, some of the neighbors and their kids and dogs were all out in the yard together. There was not one growl. It is such a miracle. And he seems a lot happier, too. What did you do?"

"We helped him to realize the gentle giant that he is. Because when you know you hold the power, then you can treat the world with love and compassion."

Another week passed and I was given the opportunity to meet Sammy in person. From out of the back of his car, came a happy, tail wagging dog who immediately came up and leaned on me. "He doesn't seem very aggressive," I said.

"I know," Malcolm smiled, "He's our miracle. Thank you."

Working with Missing Animals

"Tender is missing and has been gone for a week," the woman exclaimed on the other end of the phone line, "Can you help me?"

Cheryl had been referred to me by another animal communicator (AC). Apparently, many ACs are reluctant to deal with missing animals. This is when our abilities are put to a test with tangible results. The animal will either come home or it will not. If the AC is unable to understand the greater picture this can be a scary endeavor, because we want to be right.

I'm not psychic and I tell anyone who calls me about a missing animal there is only so much I can do. I have been wrong before, which has made me look deeper into each situation. What I have discovered is that I am often used by the Universe in a grand learning lesson.

When it comes to the missing, I always check, re-check, and then ask for outside help. The answer may be very clear the animal is coming home, but then it doesn't. What's that about? In the Big Picture, it tells me I am not always privy to the Universal mind. It also tells me when a dog says it's coming home and it doesn't, there is a different lesson for all. Often the lesson is about letting go, or about powerlessness. There is so much going on with the missing and I realize, I too, have been drawn into the grand plan. My primary concern is always to be honest and straightforward with the person. The last thing I want to do is create false hope.

With the case of Tender, I kept receiving the communication of her being alive, nearby, and okay. I also received she had been removed from her property. Cheryl took action and plastered her town with flyers.

Each day, I would check in with Tender expecting to hear the worse, but each day I received the impression she was going to be returned and so I told Cheryl.

Several more days past and Tender was not home yet. Cheryl called to tell me she contacted a TV news station. She did her best to keep me out of it but, the reporter wanted to speak to me since I am a "novelty." I am not naïve to think that if I speak with a news reporter for twenty minutes about helping Tender come home, that things won't get twisted. I requested back lighting because I had no interest in being in the news, I just wanted to help Tender. I spent time with the reporter explaining the nature of how I work and how I do my best to help.

Needless to say, I was unprepared to be dubbed "the ABQ Psychic", and a woman looking to "prey" on the raw emotions of people who have lost their animals. And, how I'm most likely a "scam". That was just the opening headlines for the story. "Dr. Doolittle" was mentioned and from the AC standpoint it just got worse.

Since I don't watch TV for good reason, a friend gave me the blow-by-blow the morning after the story ran. My heart sank; not because I was put in such bad light but because the newscast probably didn't help Tender. I felt stupid because I had trusted in the Universe. I had asked and re-asked if I should do the interview, because I didn't want to, and each time, I received a "Yes". And so, trusting in the Divine, I did the interview. Now, I was kicking myself.

After I hung up with my friend, I called Cheryl to apologize for screwing up things. At 9am I woke her up. "Madison, Hi," she said, "thank you so much for the interview last night. It was because you agreed to do the interview that they ran the story. You were the angle that made it not just another missing dog story. And guess what, right after the program aired the station received a call from the people who had Tender. We went and picked her up last night. She's home. We couldn't have done it without you."

The Universe's timing was perfect.

"You gave us the hope to keep looking," Cheryl said. "Bless you for your willingness to be interviewed, which guaranteed they would show the story. Tender came home because of you."

"Today," Cheryl continued, "I'm going to introduce her to the neighbors and take down the flyers. There is some fishiness regarding the people's story, but I don't care. Tender is home."

I never know how the Universe will work me. But then, it is not up to me to know, it is up to me to say, "Yes." And so it is.

We seldom know how the Universe works. We can only trust that all is in perfection.

Bear News

"Madison, I have a bear in my yard!" Peter said as he held the phone with one hand and moved the window curtain with the other. "Yeah, he's standing right out front. What does he want?"

This was not the first time Peter had seen the bear. After we established there was no bird seed or garbage accessible to the bear and for all practical reasons there was no reason for him to be hanging out, I asked the bear what he was up to. In a nutshell he said, "Tell Peter it's time for him to come out of his cave."

Peter was a quiet guy who lived on the periphery of life. The bear continued, "He's learned enough in his quietude and is ready to share his wisdom with others."

"Yeah, but," Peter responded. The bear had hit a nerve.

"What have you been up to in your quietude?" I asked.

"I've been thinking of writing a book," Peter said.

"So that's why you have called in the bear, to let yourself know you are on the right track with your book idea."

"I guess I better start writing," Peter said.

Two weeks later, the bear was still around. "Have you started writing?" I asked Peter.

"Not yet, still thinking about it."

My sense is that when Peter finally puts pen to paper the bear will leave.

Upcoming Web-site!

I am happy to announce that after all this time, I am finally establishing a web-site! In my daily requests to the Universe I recently added that I needed a highly skilled, affordable, kick-butt Web Master. It was only days after I sent my request via prayer that a friend told me about Lynn Cumiskey of Your Alchemy Lab, located in Atlanta, GA.

We have been emailing back and forth plotting and planning. Now comes the fun part. I have many pictures from you and would love to put some of them on the web-site. I would use your animal's name and your last initial. If for any reason you would like your animal to not be famous, please send me a quick note. Otherwise, you may see your pet on my site. Also, if you haven't sent me a picture and you would like your pet to be on one of the web pages please email or snail mail a photo.

I'm not sure when the web-site will be up and running, but it will be something we can all look forward to.

spraying and urination

The phenomenon of cats marking their territory, especially indoors, produces anxiety for many cat owners. The very first thing to know is that cats are not malicious or sneaky; They don't go around marking objects by spraying to irritate you. Cats spray and mark territory as a way of communication and declaring ownership....

We Are Not Alone

One of the reason's I can do the energy work and the animal communication is because I understand how everything is connected. It is only when we look out our eyeballs and touch solid walls do we realize that there is separation. When we take the opportunity to go inward, close our eyes to the outside reality and call in spirit do we then get glimpses of the divine unity of all that is.

So instead of telling you another ghost story, I would like to invite you to take a moment to sit still. Stop what you're doing. Close your eyes and take in a few deep breaths. Think of an animal from your past, one that has passed. Whether they simply walked out, or were put to sleep take a moment and think of them. Can you picture them in your mind's eye. Can you remember what they looked like, what special marks they had, what they smelled like? Call them to you. Are they sitting in your lap? Are they next to you on the sofa or are you walking through a field together? Just experience being with them again. Now take a moment and let them know how much you have missed them. Ask all the questions you want about their transition, how they liked living with you, what they are up to now. Listen. Pretend.

Even if you don't think you are hearing them, make up the story you think they would tell you. And watch as you realize they are giving you the words that make up the story.

When we understand there is no separation, no death, no ending, no beginning, that All is continuous with glimpses of different starts and stops in our three dimensional world then we can rest. There is nothing to lose. How can we lose our friend when he stands beside us in spirit form? This place where you meet is real, if you choose it to be. So make it real and say hello to a friend you haven't seen in a while.
